Engage grantees

Easily create modern forms that pre-screen and allow candidates to upload any supporting files.

Collaborate effectively

Work more closely with your candidates, grants staff, program staff, reviewers and board in one place.

Demonstrate impact

Powerful reporting tools to help you track, measure and illustrate the impact of your grant.

Submit has been a grant application management game changer for our organisation. The platform allowed us to streamline our grant process while allowing for better control and input from key Board members.

Here's How To Streamline All 3 Phases Of The Grant Cycle

Grant management needs a smart approach, and getting started with an all-in-one management platform equips you with all the advanced processes you need to do your best work.

When it comes to philanthropy, funders have almost as much administrative work as the actual grantmaking itself.

And while you can't remove any aspects of the planning, implementation and management process, you can certainly streamline each step and simplify things as much as possible.

Along with best practices for grantmakers, we've put together four ways to streamline each stage of the grants management process so you and your team can save more time and put your resources towards the more pressing parts of the job.

These 7 Grant Management Mistakes Will Cost You Big Time

The common goal of any funder is that organisations awarded with the grant do what they proposed, within the required budget, and generate some positive press in return.

And while the world of philanthropy doesn't always go according to plan, there are a few ways grant managers themselves slip up in the process.

For the most part, those little mistakes can be easily remedied and not much harm be done.

But every now and then, funders make judgement errors significant enough that it could cost them large amounts of money and in the worst cases, an open opportunity for grant fraud to occur from right beneath them.
